ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I am truly grateful to my supervisor Dr. B.N. Koul of the Department of Correspondence Courses who gave me generously of his time and advice. He took great pains to read through the draft versions of my dissertation very carefully and to make a number of valuable suggestions which have helped immensely in the final shaping of this document; whatever imperfections might still be noticed are evidences of my oversight. I am thankful also to Prof. P.T. George of the Department of Materials Production who was willing and happy to spare time for discussions with me whenever I was in doubt or in difficulties and needed clarifications; his comments on various aspects of my study revealed certain insights which I would not perhaps have got from anywhere else.

I am deeply indebted to my family for the endurance and patience with which they shared all the problems that I faced during the period of my study — for my husband's understanding which sustained me through the worst days, and for my children's encouragement which enabled me to complete the study in good time. I must specially mention my elder son Mathew's help with the scoring of the answer scripts of my students (except for the answers to the last question which required a qualitative assessment) and with the tabulation of the scores; he did the whole job by himself, and the credit for the neat work goes entirely to him. I must record with gratitude my younger son Thomas's efforts in arranging the bibliography in the alphabetical order. It was originally a 750-item reading list that twelve-year-old Thomas arranged in the right order, and I later picked and chose from this original list the items that were relevant for my purposes. I must say that he deserves to reserve completely for himself the credit for having accomplished a stupendous task without a single mistake anywhere.

I will be failing in my duty if I do not mention Mr. D.P. Sharma whose excellent typing of this dissertation made my proofreading of it a pleasurable job instead of the drudgery it would otherwise have been.

It is needless to say that I would not have been able to undertake this study unless I had been granted Study Leave from the Institute, and that I would not have been able to finish it had it not been for the excellent assistance of Mr. L.S. Ramaiah and his library staff. I am thankful to everyone who has in some way contributed to make this study possible.
