Table of Contents

Acknowledgements ........................................... i

Table of contents ........................................... ii

Abstract .................................................................. xii

1 Introduction to the study ................................. 1
   1.1 Background to the study ............................. 1
   1.2 Relevance of the study ............................... 5
   1.3 Scope of the study ...................................... 6
   1.4 Limitations .............................................. 7
   1.5 Role of the researcher ................................. 8
   1.6 A preview of chapters ............................... 9
   1.7 Drawing together ..................................... 10

2 ESL and curriculum studies- a conceptual overview 11
   2.1 Introduction ........................................... 11
   2.2 Understanding syllabus design .................... 12
      2.2.1 Concerns of a syllabus ......................... 14
   2.3 A review of syllabus framework .................. 17
      2.3.1 Issues in syllabus design ...................... 19
2.4 Concerns of a curriculum
   2.4.1 Curriculum in the present study

2.5 Role of the micro and macro level context

2.6 Curriculum Studies
   2.6.1 Curriculum theorising

2.7 Ideological orientations
   2.7.1 Technical orientation
   2.7.2 Practical orientation
   2.7.3 Emancipatory orientation
   2.7.4 ESL issues under each orientation

2.8 Curricular issues in ESL

2.9 Need for broadening the scope of ESL
   2.9.1 ESL curriculum: insights from Johnson

2.10 Emerging issues in curriculum: a discussion
   2.10.1 Analysis of technical issues

2.11 Knowledge, power and subject formation

2.12 Research plan for the study
   2.12.1 Eclectic approach
   2.12.2 Nature of inquiry in the present study
3 Framework for curriculum theorising

3.1 Introduction

3.2 Curriculum research as interpreted in the study

3.3 An overview of the naturalistic paradigm

3.3.1 Implications for operationalising the research

3.4 Eclectic approach to curriculum theorising

3.4.1 Ethnography

3.4.2 Critical Ethnography

3.4.3 Insights from critical social inquiry

3.5 Features of the framework for curriculum theorising

3.5.1 How the concepts are used

3.5.2 Curriculum theorising in the eclectic framework

3.5.3 Practical Knowledge

3.5.4 The role of social context

3.6 Thematic review of related research

3.6.1 Studies in ethnography of communication

3.6.2 Ethnographic study of an ESL classroom

3.6.3 Studies in ESL curriculum
3.7 Significant features of theorising

3.7.1 Thick description

3.7.2 Role of the researcher

3.7.3 Building up empirical rigour

3.7.4 Process of data collection and interpretation

3.8 Drawing together

4 Micro-level reconstruction of the curricular Site

4.1 Introduction

4.2 The thematic approach

4.3 Emerging questions

4.4 A summary of research tools used

4.5 Thematic organisation of data analysis

4.6 An overview of the fieldwork

4.7 The process of data collection and analysis

4.8 Gaining access and providing information

4.9 Briefing the students

4.10 The curricular site

4.10.1 The college
4.10.2 The Department of English
4.10.3 The ESL syllabus
4.11 Analysis of the syllabus
4.12 Classroom Observation
  4.12.1 Preferred method
  4.12.2 Impact of class size
  4.12.3 Text in the class
  4.12.4 Classroom management
4.13 Staff room Observation
  4.13.1 Appropriacy of textbooks
  4.13.2 Syllabus and extra work
  4.13.3 Team spirit and leadership
4.14 St-script
  4.14.1 English - a subject?
  4.14.2 Relaxation in English classes
  4.14.3 Classroom activities
  4.14.4 Extensive reading
4.15 T-reports
  4.15.1 Analysis of T-reports
  4.15.2 Strategy for creating interest
4.15.3 Timetable, planning, organizing 199
4.15.4 Large classes 200

4.16 St-quest 200
4.16.1 Perceptions about the textbooks 202
4.16.2 Pedagogic procedures 205
4.16.3 Reflections on classroom activities 205
4.16.4 Desirable textbooks and activities 206
4.16.5 Some observations about the students 206

4.17 Student Interview 208
4.17.1 Text in the class 210
4.17.2 Autonomous college 213

4.18 Teacher interview 217
4.18.1 Syllabus and textbooks 218
4.18.2 Teaching methodology 222
4.18.3 Managing curricular changes 225
4.18.4 Perceptions about autonomy 226
4.18.5 Perceptions about students 226
4.18.6 Managing change 226

4.19 Analysis of Teacher Interviews 227

4.20 Drawing together 231
5 Macro-level reconstruction of the curricular site

5.1 Introduction 232

5.2 Significance of the macro context 232

5.3 Historicizing the ESL curriculum 235
  5.3.1 The colonial objectives 236
  5.3.2 Institutionalizing English in pre-independence India 238
  5.3.3 Insights on colonial education 241

5.4 Institutionalising English in post-independence India 243
  5.4.1 ESL: a post-independence reformulation 245

5.5 Disciplinary formation of ESL in India 247

5.6 Emerging issues: a discussion 254
  5.6.1 The status of English in India - is it ESL or EFL? 255
  5.6.2 A concern for standard 258
  5.6.3 The language-literature divide 261
  5.6.4 A critique of method – insights from Pennycook 262

5.7 Curricular decisions in ESL at the tertiary level 263
  5.7.1 The Study Group Reports 264

5.8 The curricular decisions - a summary 269

5.9 Micro-macro analysis 270
5.9.1 Objectives of General English 271
5.9.2 Language – Literature 272
5.9.3 Method and methodology 273
5.9.4 Syllabus restructuring 274
5.9.5 Autonomy 275

5.10 Drawing together 277

6 The curricular site – a critical reconstruction 278

6.1 Introduction 278

6.2 Scheme for critical interpretation 279

6.3 The context 279

   6.3.1 Criteria for change 281
   6.3.2 The role of the Board of Studies 285
   6.3.3 Catalyst for change 287
   6.3.4 Issue of workload 289
   6.3.5 The issue of dynamic leadership 289

6.4 The content 290

   6.4.1 Scope for curricular change 291
   6.4.2 Hurdles to change 293
   6.4.3 The textbook – politics of prescription 297