ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

A research endeavour cannot be completed without the help and nurturance from others. It has been a long and arduous journey for me. However, it is my trust in Allah Almighty that has kept me strong throughout all the complicated turns in this journey. I consider knowledge conception and production a religious mission that should be sincerely done. Therefore, seeing the difference in meaning/knowledge making that we make as scholars a gift from Allah, I humbly acknowledge that the good aspects that exist in this work are Allah's gift to the world through me. Whatever inconsistency or shortage in meaning/knowledge making that exists in this work, it is to be attributed to my yet-to-grow dialogic situatedness and responsivity in academic meaning/knowledge making as well as to my still-to-develop dialogic intersubjective interaction with past and present scholars.

My special thanks go to my supervisor Prof. Premakumari Dheram for her interest in my well being and for the space and freedom she allowed me in making my academic discourse internally persuasive. Our intellectual discussions have been illuminating and inspiring.

I express a deep sense of gratitude to Prof. Jacob Tharu for his support and comments on four chapters of my thesis. His inspirational ideas and comments have been invaluable to me.

I cannot be thankful enough to my mentor Prof. C.N. Srinivasan for our innumerable dialogues. His helpful comments enabled me conceptualize my framework.

I am grateful to Prof. Eugene Matusov, the chief editor of the International Journal of Dialogic Pedagogy, for editing a considerable portion of my thesis as well as for his insightful dialogic responses. Interacting with him has been a wonderful learning experience. Being a member of the journal has provided me with a lot of insights that has caused my thesis to take an enhanced Bakhtinian dialogic turn.
My thanks are also due to Prof. Rajgobal, Prof. Prahlad, and Prof. Paul for their valuable academic discussions.

My family members and relatives have been supportive and loving. I have a lot to thank them for but I leave it to God to reward them as I feel that my thanking language will fall short of what they really deserve.

My friends have renewed my inspiration and I cherished with them a lot of sweet moments that have made homesickness bearable. Najwa! Without your warmth, compassion, as well as belief in me, I do not know where I would have ended. Sawasn! You have been the mother after losing my biological mother in the last year of my study. Your dedication to my service in my desperate time and encompassing love were healing touches to my wounded soul. You and husband, Mansour, have been my family in India. Sahar! I will always remember your insistence to drag me out of the bed to study. You listened to me patiently and committed yourself for a considerable period of time to help me revive my self confidence. I do not forget Jacklin and Huda who have been more than wonderful friends. Yaser has been a dedicated colleague and a brother. He has done a meticulous job proofreading and formatting my thesis with untiring patience. He has also written my table of content. Cholpon! Thank you for proofreading chapter four and scanning a lot of the documents appended to this thesis.

The library staff has done me a lot of favours locating missing books and journals. The librarian, Dr. Satish, has facilitated and made comfortable my study hours in the library.

I thank the students who have taken pains of writing and re-writing for a period that had extended for three months. Thanks also go to Dr. Nabeel, the dean of Zabid College, and to Dr. Adel Qadaha, the Head of English Department at the time of the study, for facilitating my fieldwork.

The last but not the least, I am indebted to The Indian Council for Cultural Relation (ICCR). Without the scholarship they have provided me as well as their official support, my stay and the procedures of getting Visa and Residential Permit would have been a painful experience.
