ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

The researcher owes his gratitude to his External Guide, Prof S.K. Chakraborty, Ex-professor Management Centre of Human Values, IIM Kolkata, who has literally initiated him into this thought process and whom he considers a role-model of a Raj Guru. The researcher also extend his thanks and gratitude to his internal guide Dr. S.P.S. Narang of UPES who guided him during the course of research particularly in respect of formatting and documentation. Grateful thanks are also due to Dr. Sunita Singh Sengupta, Chairperson and Founder, Integrating Spirituality and Organizational Leadership Foundation, presently Professor in Organizational Behaviour, Faculty of Management Studies, University of Delhi, who has taken pains to guide the researcher in systematic evaluation of various findings and also interviewing several ex-colleagues of the researcher. Acknowledgments are also due to Dr V P Singh, of UPES who has kept up constant focus on the subject that helped the researcher to be steadfast in his investigation. Dr. Meenu Mishra also deserves grateful thanks for her constant support and guidance during the research work. It is hoped that this research document will serve as a useful reference study for adoption by all practising Managers and research scholars.

The researcher also acknowledges with all humility the ready responses received from his erstwhile colleagues (some serving and some superannuated) both for responding to the questionnaire and also registering their views in the form of interviews. The study covers relevant theory aspects and provides a sequential narration as to what ‘Indian Ethos’ is and why it can serve as a good tool to modern managers. This is followed by details of work site experiments and case studies which reflect the perceptible change in work environment brought about by actual practice of management based on Indian Ethos, this is backed up by analytic response to questionnaire sent out to persons who were one time colleagues and who were directly impacted by the management style adopted during service tenure of the researcher. In addition, the details of interviews of some erstwhile colleagues have been incorporated mostly to authenticate the deep impact of researchers work style based on Management by Indian Ethos. The net effect or the sum total of practice and preaching is quite positive thereby confirming the age old logic that it is practice alone makes a man perfect. It is sincerely believed that the research document put up for scrutiny and approval meets the high standards of a Doctoral Thesis.

The researcher thanks his associates particularly Rajni, Shijo and Vandana for rendering extensive secretarial help in preparing this document. Shri Abhinav Singh M.B.A. and working executive also needs special thanks for helping the researcher in compiling the research document.

New Delhi
Date: 12\textsuperscript{th} February 2010

\[\text{Signature}\]
\begin{flushright}
J. L. Raina
\end{flushright}