PREFACE AND ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

I undertook the research project entitled 'Politics of Land Reforms in West Bengal: 1972-1982', in the Department of Political Science, The University of Burdwan, in 1989, under the able guidance of Prof. Apurba Mukhopadhyay. I cannot express my indebtedness to him just by way of a formal acknowledgement. In fact it was he who had generated in me interest in, and inquisitiveness about, changing agrarian relations in West Bengal during the last few decades.

In addition, I want to express my gratitude to Dr. Aswini Ray, Professor of Political Science, Jawaharlal Nehru University and Dr. Sudipto Kaviraj of the same University with whom I could discuss for hours many of the issues dealt with by me in this study. The Late Professor Ashok Rudra, an eminent economist, inspired me in a number of ways in pursuing my work. Dr. RadhaRaman Chakraborty, Director, Netaji Institute For Asian Studies who taught us in Post-graduate classes in the University of Burdwan has been a constant source of inspiration. I am also grateful to all the faculty members in the Department of Political Science for their advice and encouragement throughout the period of my work. To Professor Bipadtaran Ghosh, I am particularly grateful for the interest he took in my study.

Dr. Aparna Roy extended her co-operation in making me aware of many of the technicalities involved in the process of collecting and processing data and in stimulating me to think over my subject of exploration through many informal encounters. I must mention the academic help and assistance I received from Dr. Arun Ghosh of Netaji Institute For Asian Studies, Sri Shyama Prasad Kundu, an educationist of Burdwan, Sri Asim Mukhopadhyay of Jadavpur University and Sri Basanta Ghosh of the University of Burdwan. Members and staff of the Central and Seminar Libraries of the University of Burdwan, of the National Library, Calcutta, of Jawaharlal Nehru University Library, New Delhi, of West Bengal State Assembly Library, Calcutta, and of the Library of the Centre For Studies in Social Sciences, Calcutta co-operated with me at different stages of the present work.

I acknowledge, with a deep sense of gratitude, the help I received from eminent politicians of the district of Birbhum and of West Bengal as well who spared their precious time in responding to my queries. Government officials involved in the administration of land reforms and rural development in West Bengal allowed me an easy access to them whenever their help was sought by me. To the villagers of the two blocks, namely Labpur and Nanoor, particularly the poor and illiterate among them, I am indebted for their sympathy and kindness, despite my yet to be left behind 'babu' image. They, in fact, taught me much more about social realities than I could gather from my formal academic training.
Finally, I am dutybound to acknowledge the self-denial of Smt. Rita Misra, my wife who sustained my family life despite my prolonged absence from home, just for her passion for my academic enrichment.

Typing assistance has been ably provided by Sri Ananta Palit and Sri Anjan Palit. They deserve my thanks for the service rendered by them. All errors of omissions and commissions and all the views expressed in this work are, however, mine and mine only.

Harip Kumer Misra
