

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This project was yet another learning experience for me to grow in trusting in the loving providence of Parabrahma.

Politics of Freedom: An Analysis of Ismail Kadare's Selected Works is the result of my desire to know better Ismail Kadare and the Albanian culture in which his literature is rooted. This desire began around nine years ago, the day I finished reading The Broken April and The Palace of Dreams, two famous novels by Ismail Kadare.*

The thesis is the result of the encouragement, guidance and support of a great number of persons who are inseparably linked to my life.

First and foremost, I thank Dr. Upot Sherine, my supervising teacher who was generous enough to accept me as her student and guide me safely through the maze of writing.

I take this opportunity to thank the office and library staff of School of Letters, my Research Centre. I am also thankful for the support which my good friends Laya, Farija, Mini Chechi, Priya and others have provided.

I reserve my greatest appreciation for my mother who persistently scolded me into writing this thesis. She made things happen.

My thankful regards go to all members of my large family, especially Mr. Yanjasenan Nair, a strong person, for his keen interest and constant encouragement.

For wedding me to a world of positive thoughts, love and patience I thank my husband and my friend, Dr. Suraj K. Nair, whose confidence sustained me when the stress and anxiety that naturally accompanies the completion of a research work threatened to overwhelm me.

A special word of thanks to my brother, Ganesh for his boundless concern and love...

Words are few to express my love for my little princesses Janaki and Madhavi, for patiently enduring all the hardships of having a research scholar for mother.

I am indeed grateful to all of them.
