

LIST OF GRAPHS

Sl.No.	CONTENT OF GRAPHS	Page.No
1.1	Exhibit – 1.1 TRAINING CYCLE	4
1.2	Exhibit – 1.2 STAGES IN CAREER DEVELOPMENT	13
3.2	Distribution of Sample Respondents – According to Age	107
3.3	Distribution of Sample Respondents – According to Service	108
3.4	Distribution of Sample Respondent According to Nativity	109
3.5	Distribution of Sample Respondent - According to Language	110
3.6	Distribution of Sample Respondent - According to the size of the family	111
3.7	Distribution of Sample Respondent - According to Martial status	112
3.8	Distribuiton of Sample Respondents - According to Nature of their Job Non-Managers	113
3.9	Distribution of Sample Respondent - According to their l Background Non-Managers	114
3.10	Distribution of Sample Respondent - According to their Income Non-Managers	115
3.11	Distribution of Sample Respondent - According to their Income	116
5.1	There is a widely shared training and development policy in the organisation.	147
5.2	Induction training is given adequate importance and to explain norms and values of the ITC Ltd.,	149
5.3	There is process for assessing the organizations immediate training need analysis.	151
5.4	Training programmes are design after considering need and requirements of the employees	153
5.5	The individuals job related skills knowledge and ability were consider in assessing training needs	155

5.6	Training calendar provides in detail the number of training programmes to be provided to the employees in that year	157
5.7	Allocation of funds is made in the budget to conduct training programmes.	159
5.8	Training programmes organised help to improve one's capability and potentials	161
5.9	Employees are given training before they are placed on new jobs/assignment	163
5.10	Development of workers is given adequate importance in the organisation.	165
5.11	There is strong supportive climate for training	167
5.12	Employees training is congruent with career plans	169
5.13	The employees are helped acquired technical knowledge and skills through training	171
5.14	Employees returning from training are given adequate free time to reflect and plan improvements in the organisation.	173
5.15	Line managers provide the right kind of climate to implement new ideas and methods acquired by their juniors during training	175
5.16	The results of training programmes are monitored	177
5.17	The organisation measures the return on investment in training	179
5.18	The performance appraisal system of our organization is capable of assessing all the activities performed by employees	181
5.19	The PA system provides an opportunity for each appraisee to know what the management really expects from him	183
5.20	Periodic feedback regarding performance is given to almost all employees in our organisation.	185
5.21	Performance management aligns organisational and individual objectives.	187
5.22	The appraisal system provides an opportunity for each appraisee to have a clear understanding of what is expected for him/her	189
5.23	Employees do not have any major grievances against the	191

	existing performance appraisal system
5.24	The appraisal system aims at strengthening appraiser- appraise relationship through mutuality and trust.	193
5.25	The objectives of performance appraisal system are simply to understand and clearly known to all employees.	195
5.26	Self appraisal is a part of our system	197
5.27	Performance Appraisal system is linked to rewards such as annual increments	199
5.28	The employees get immediate feed back on their performance after appraisal process	201
5.29	The HR department actively review each appraisal and discusses with the line managers.	203
5.30	The organisation provides guidance for future performance based on the appraisal data	205
5.31	The organisation takes an effort to discover one's potential for higher responsibilities in the appraisal process	207
5.32	There are mechanisms to assess the extent to which an individual has the potential to perform the new task / job	209
5.33	Promotions are based on employees abilities and maturity to handle higher positions and responsibilities.	211
5.34	Feed back is provided to the individuals whose potential was assessed to discover their strengths or weakness.	213
5.35	The organisation support the employees in utilising they potentials discovered.	215
5.36	The employees in this organisation have better prospects as company designs better career plans.	217
5.37	The organisation creates awareness on the existence of a formal career plan.	219
5.38	Career paths are shared with employees	221
5.39	There is a great extent of individuals participation in deciding the career plan	223
5.40	Career planning improves morale and motivation by matching skills to job requirements	225