

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I wish to express my deepest gratitude to Dr. A.K. Saihpal, Professor in Management, Faculty of Management and Commerce, Panjab University, Chandigarh, for his invaluable and consistent guidance and everlasting encouragement throughout the course of the study. I feel immensely honoured to have worked under a person like Dr. Saihpal, who in spite of his accomplished stature is a quintessence of humility, unconditional giving and generosity.

I am at loss of words to express my deep indebtedness to Dr. (Mrs.) Krishna Oberoi, Senior Scientist cum Coordinator of Research, Department of Family Resource Management, College of Home Science, Panjab Agricultural University, Ludhiana, for her valuable and practical guidance, wholehearted support and sustained encouragement for the successful culmination of my work.

Special thanks are due to Dr. (Mrs.) Sukhvarsha Nirula, Principal and Chairperson Govt. Home Science College, Chandigarh, for providing the facilities, encouragement and support to carry on this research.

I also wish to thank Dr. (Mrs.) Varinder Kaur Thind, Principal, Khalsa College for Women, Ludhiana, for her support and guidance in this endeavor.

My heartfelt thanks to Mrs. Kavita Marriya, Head of Dept., Clothing and Textiles at Government Home Science College Chandigarh and Mrs. Rakesh Sachdeva, Principal, D.A.V. School, Chandigarh for their wholehearted cooperation and support during the course of this thesis.

My special thanks are also due to Dr. (Mrs.) Amrit Walia, Head of the History Department, Khalsa College for Women, Ludhiana, for constant inspiration throughout the course of the study.

I extend my due thanks to Mr. Amritpal from the Department of Economics, Panjab Agricultural University, Ludhiana, for his suggestions and assistance in the statistical interpretation of this study.

Thanks are due to Mr. Rakesh Kumar (Somalia Printers) for his assistance in compiling and presentation of this dissertation.

Last but not the least, my sincere thanks are due to Professor. N.K. Kalia, Retired Principal, Panjab University, for his assistance and guidance for the composition of English text and grammar and for continuously encouraging and supporting me throughout the course of my work.

Finally, sincere and deep thanks are extended to my parents, husband, family members and friends for their constant help and encouragement at every stage of this venture.

Dated 12-4-2007

*Renu Saini
(Renu Saini)*